hello. when i was initially score at CRAF in May 2018, i was given 4 points and full minimum status. soon after i was improperly given an e-1 override based on dismissed charges that kept me in medium status. i appealed this wrongful override and finally -- 20 months later -- on january 7, 2020, the appellate court ordered the DOC to remove this override, which DOC did. however, during those 20 months that i had the unlawful and improper override, i could not earn full min. credits, as i would have had the override never been given in the first place. because i received no disciplinary charges during those 20 months, and because the override was improperly imposed, i should now receive the credits i would have earned as a full minimum status inmate. i recognize that after the override was recently removed, and i was given a new override. still, this new override shouldn't effect the 20 month period where i should have received full min. status credit off my max date. thank you.

K1 Override was applied due to circumstances of offense.

this grievance is not about the k1 override per se; i am requesting to receive full min good time credits for the 20-month period that i wrongfully received the e1 override. because the court ruled that override was unwarranted and removed it, and because i was classified for full min status at craf, that override prevented me from receiving full min credits. i should receive full min credits off my max date for that 20- month period. k1 has nothing to do with that period where the e1 override was given, then later adjudged unlawful. thank you.

this grievance is not about the k1 override per se. it is about the 20-month period that i received the e1 override, which prevented me from earning full minimum good time credits, and which the court of appeals later removed as unlawful. when i arrived at craf i was set for full min status, until the override was given. that override was, 20-months or so later, removed. thus, i should receive the full min good time credits i would otherwise have earned for that 20-month period. thank you.
